Comparing Therapy Track to EMRs

As of 2006, adoption of EMRs has been relatively minimal in the United States. Obstacles to EMR implementation include interoperability challenges, privacy concerns, complicated system software overhauls, and barriers to entry for smaller hospital systems, stand-alone hospitals and clinics.

Even those hospital systems that have successfully implemented EMR are faced with significant limitations, like the inability for individual users to specify parameters, lack of target-setting functions, and reporting that is limited to historical data.

Therapy Track is a completely different animal than EMRs!

Therapy Track is a tool for therapy department directors, managers and staff. It offers depth, focus and collaborative features that EMRs are simply not designed for.

For staff members, our productivity tool encourages and motivates and demands performance, keeping track of goals and making it easy to stay on course.

For managers, the possibilities are practically endless. Beyond the extensive list of features, like real-time reporting, goal setting, ease of implementation and HIPPA-compliant security, Therapy Track empowers users by:

- Giving individual staff members a great opportunity for accountability within the department – by building a meaningful performance record, creating their own success, and having access to an overview of their position in the department – how they're doing, who they're helping, how they could enhance their performance to benefit themselves, the department and the patients.
- Giving managers the freedom to run their dream therapy department! We don't pretend to tell managers how to run their departments. Our primary goal is to give managers the opportunity to make the best decisions they can to run their departments – with the most complete set of up-to-the-minute facts and most powerful reporting, staffing and productivity tools on the market today.
