Did You Know?

Therapy Track can be linked up to your hospital's internal charging system!

Your staff can enter their charges and stats at the same time, and the data can be transmitted to Therapy Track for conversion to our charts and tracking processes. You get all the same great Therapy Track benefits!

Listen Up!

Who's your best audience and your worst critic all wrapped up in one? It's your patients, and any therapy department should institute a variety of tactics for soliciting their feedback -- good or bad! -- and putting it to use.

Reaching out for feedback doesn't have to be expensive, although professional marketing surveys can be a valuable expenditure. But before you begin looking for space in your budget, try this simple technique:

Start by listening! It's always important to ask patients what they like or don't like about your services. Talk with them on the phone or during a treatment session to get answers. While you shouldn't make specific promises, it's critical that you make use of the information or at least acknowledge their input. Otherwise, you run the risk of alienating patients by asking for feedback, but not doing anything about it!

Therapy Track's motto is:

If you can't measure it, you can't reward it. If you can't reward it, you can't improve it.
